Harnessing the Power of Community Media to Combat Disinformation

THE MEDIA HACKS PROJECT

FIGHTING DISINFORMATION AND FAKE NEWS

Do you trust everything you see on the news?

Research has shown that approximately 66% of Europeans come across fake news or disinformation on a weekly basis. This number should not be taken lightly as misinformation can have a big impact in our lives and our communities. From limiting the way we think to spreading misleading health treatments that can permanently damage one's health, fake news is an issue that needs to be tackled.

With the aim of improving the media literacy of local communities and combating disinformation, the Media Hacks project consortium will work together with local teams to implement activities and develop resources that can fully prepare community members to deal with fake or misleading news.
